ANGUILLANS . . .
said he was questioned about the theft of some water. He claimed he was beaten, but Lee denied this.

A Virgin Islands resident, William Greer, was ordered off the island.

Whether the reports of arrests and beatings were exaggerated or not, there obviously was a considerable increase in tensions.

The Anguillans seemed caught by surprise by a 14-page document issued by Lee to the Anguilla Council last week, called "The Anguilla Temporary Provisional Order, 1969."

It imposed the right to search persons, property and homes, without warrants, by police and British soldiers, if there is suspicion "they are being used for any purpose prejudicial to the maintenance of law and order."

It provides that British authorities may declare areas of the island as "protected areas" and restrict or prohibit movement in them.

It requires that permission must be obtained in writing for any meetings of more than five persons.

The British landed paratroopers in Anguilla on March 19 to put an end to its unilateral declaration of independence and force its 6,000 islanders back under British jurisdiction.

Lee acknowledged in an interview that searches of homes by British police, which has continued this week, could "inflamm" passions.

He said, however, that he had no control over the police, but he added that "I'll speak to the police about it."

There have been almost daily demonstrations against the British presence since Good Friday and against Lee although the demonstrators often have been few in number. They have shouted their demands that "Lee must go."

Lee had not tried to go to his office yet this week.

"I view these demonstrations more in sorrow than in anger," he said.

ST. THOMAS (AP) — An angry and shouting Robert Bradshaw, Premier of the British Associated State of St. Kitts-Nevis-Anguilla, says that Anguilla "is part of the Associated State and will so remain."

Bradshaw likened the arrival on Anguilla of British paratroopers to U. S. involvement in South Vietnam. He also said "it was required by treaty."

Asked about the agreement which was signed by Anguilla leaders and a representative of Her Majesty's government, Lord Caradon, more than one week ago, Bradshaw questioned the existence of an agreement.

Referring to Anguilla leader Ronald Webster, Bradshaw said, "poor Webster . . . the idiot that he is."

The premier said that the British government took over Anguilla rightfully "though two years too late." He said it was done to "rid Anguilla of report that many crimes are committed by youths who are supposed to be in the Center.

The center originally was set up to care for homeless children from broken homes. Instead, juveniles accused of such serious crimes as mugging tourists are sent there to await disposition of their cases.

In the Virgin Islands, a municipal court judge can send a young person to jail where he is supposed to be segregated from adult criminals. Unfortunately, there is no room in the jails for this kind of segregation.

The Insular Training School on St. Croix—according to people who work with delinquents — is what used to be called a reform school. Because of the overcrowded conditions, very little training goes on.

Police say they continually see boys who are charged with serious offenses turned loose in the courts after they have promised to "join the Job Corps or the Army." These same offenders are usually picked up by police again and again.

One young braggart wrongly claims that "when the police want me, they never send one man. They always send ten."

Of such an individual, Chief Wilson said "there isn't anything you can do with them. The real problem is that these guys mess up a lot of other kids who think that being this way is the only way to get along."

There are no plans at present for establishment of juvenile courts. Nor are there plans for detention centers that could adequately cope with youthful offenders.

However, a special Senate Committee on the Rise in Crime in the Virgin Islands has made suggestions that a beginning at least should be made to solve these problems.

a scourge of gangsters."

Bradshaw passed through St. Thomas on his way to Washington to, in his words, "survey the scene."

Claiming the U. S. news media are misrepresenting the situation in Anguilla, the Premier said that Americans are forgetting history. He referred to President Abraham Lincoln and the U. S. Congress in 1861 and he said they were not concerned about slavery "but about preserving the Union, and they brought the South back to its senses."

planned $3 million complex in St. Thomas which would house all the Federal offices, including the post office.

Mr. King said the government is in favor of entering negotiations for the land, but there is a question about title for the land, which is located in the Barracks Yard area. Action is being initiated to attempt to clear this title.

CHASE BIDS . . .
Company, Inc. The low bid was submitted by Chase Manhattan Bank. The notes would be issued in anticipation of the sale of Electric System Revenue Bonds of the authority in the principal amount of $11,200,000.

According to Mr. Cannard, $8.8 million of the process would be used to refinance for one year notes that were negotiated in 1968. The remaining $2.4 million would be used for capital equipment, which includes $800,000 for a diesel backup generator for St. Croix and $1.6 million for a gas turbine backup power unit for St. Thomas.

The governing board of the Water and Power Authority will meet today to ratify the acceptable bid.

from Washington to Mrs. Eldra Shulterbrandt, who heads up the projects, indicated there was "gross mismanagement" of the projects.

According to King, the Islands were given until April 1 to straighten out the problems.

A spokesman for King said that the Acting Governor had seen the letter to Washington but would have no comment on it other than to say that he "would have to wait and see" if the situation were to be rectified.

Anguillans Demonstrate Anew; Arrests By British Reported

BRADSHAW, IN V. I., ANGRILY SHOUTS ANGUILLA CANNOT LEAVE FEDERATION

ANGUILLA (AP) — New anti-British demonstrations have broken out in Anguilla to protest actions of police and the British commissioner, Tony Lee.

"It's personal," Lee told an interviewer. "They are after me for personal reasons."

There are reports of arrests and at least one person was ordered off the island. An American doctor from Philadelphia also was asked to leave, but reportedly had gone into hiding with Anguillian supporters.

There seemed to be a general feeling that the British had betrayed the islanders following an agreement worked out between Lord Caradon, the British U.N. ambassador, and Anguilla's temporary president, Ronald Webster.

Webster left the island over the week end to seek support from the United Nations. He is due back in Anguilla today, and demonstrations of support are planned. Lord Caradon is scheduled to arrive tomorrow to review the situation.

Bostic Concert Tomorrow Night

Tomorrow night at Island Center, St. Croix-born Stephen Bostic will give a piano concert under the sponsorship of The St. Croix Concert Society. With many important concerts to his credit, he returned to St. Croix last year and shortly thereafter was named Executive director of the Virgin Islands Council on the Arts.

A graduate of Christiansted High School in 1950 as class valedictorian, he won a scholarship to Hampton Institute in Virginia. While there he was listed on "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges."

Following his graduation in 1955 with a Bachelor of Science degree in Music Education, he served two years as a lieutenant (Continued on page 13) curred Tuesday when about 300 Anguillans protested at the airport against the departure of Dr. Felix Spector of Philadelphia, who had been under contract to the Anguillian government as medical officer.

The demonstrators would not let Spector leave, and led him away. They reportedly have him in hiding.

Lee said he had not deported Spector. "I only asked him to leave the islands," he said. "His qualifications as a doctor were not up to British standards. He tried to schedule surgery in the hospital," Lee said.

Two persons claimed they were taken into custody by the British for lengthy interrogation. One, Alfred Gumbs, said he was questioned at length about the existence of an underground defense force on the island.

Seek More Land For U.S. Offices

Acting Governor Cyril E. King has met with representatives of the General Services Administration from Washington, D. C., and the Virgin Islands Planning Board, to discuss a request made by GSA for additional land for Federal office buildings.

According to Mr. King, GSA requires additional land before it can begin construction of the (Continued on page 14)

Asks Pueblo Boycott

Eric Dawson, the Executive Secretary of the Virgin Islands Legislature and Vice Chairman of the Democratic Party of the Virgin Islands, has called for a week-long boycott of the Pueblo Supermarkets on St. Thomas and St. Croix, reports Associated Press.

Dawson said that the prices at Pueblo markets have "not been reduced one cent" since the end of the strike of mainland dock workers. He said prices on foodstuffs went up in the islands as a result of the increased costs of shipping goods in by air during the waterfront strike.

Dawson told The Associated Press that he was not only making his boycott call as an official of the party and the Senate, but also as an "irate citizen." He said, "our paychecks didn't go up so we're suffering."

Dawson asked that all residents meet to plan the boycott which would include picketing. He declared that even before the price increase, prices for foods in the Virgin Islands were the highest under the American flag. He stated that the increases amount to between 20 and 40 per cent.

Livet La Place, manager of the Pueblo store in St. Thomas, was asked for the store's position on the matter and said, "This is all new to me and so I couldn't comment on it at this time."

Officers at Pueblo's home office in San Juan were unavailable for comment.

Elliot Slaying Evidence Sent To FBI

Robert Wilson, Chief of Virgin Islands detectives, who is in St. Croix heading the investigation of the slaying by strangulation of 21-year-old Mrs. Sylvia Elliot of New Town, Frederiksted, said yesterday that several persons had been questioned in relation to the crime.

Some of the evidence gathered, he said, has been forwarded to the Federal Bureau of Investigation for action on that agency's part. In addition, a request has been made in Puerto Rico for certain scientific equipment that will be used in the probe.

The body of Mrs. Elliot, the mother of three, was found (Continued on page 14)

Much Discussion, Little Action In Juvenile Delinquent Problem

By MATT ALLEN

(AP)—Special groups have been formed and there has been a great deal of discussion, but concern over the facilities for handling juvenile delinquents in the Virgin Islands does not appear to be reaching a point where improvements in the system are likely.

Juvenile delinquency in the Islands is not yet as serious as on the mainland. However, there are still hardened delinquents who use narcotics, drink liquor and steal as a way of life.

Detective Chief Robert Wilson, formerly with the New York City Police Department, says "we need to have a better way of dealing with these kids." Wilson said he has been urging for more than a year that some improvements be made, "if only in the area of detention."

At present, the only facilities in the Islands are the Youth Care Center in St. Thomas—which is not supposed to be a detention center—and the Insular Training School in St. Croix, which is overcrowded.

The Municipal Court judges are also the juvenile judges. The same men who deal with traffic offenders and those charged with misdemeanors, which include assaults and narcotics violations, also discipline youngsters.

In St. Thomas, the Youth Care Center lacks adequate supervision. Young offenders are free to come and go as they please. Police (Continued on page 14)

Washington Gets Project Report

A report on the status of Federally funded projects connected with the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) in the Virgin Islands has been sent to the OEO headquarters in Washington, AP reports.

The report had been requested by an official of the agency. OEO agencies in the Islands include Vista, Head Start and Operation Outreach.

The Acting V.I. Governor, Cyril King, had charged that a letter (Continued on page 14)
